NFL PLAYGROUNDS

aaf national student advertising competition

TEAM 783

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The NFL has spent years building one of the most comprehensive youth health and wellness programs in American sports. But among casual fan families, the NFL's single largest audience segment, almost none of it is visible. Only 1 in 6 casual fan parents can name a NFL youth program. The NFL is already showing up in their children's schools and playing fields, but these families just don't see it.

Team 783's primary and secondary research confirmed this is not a trust problem. It's a visibility problem. 84.8% of casual fans associate the NFL primarily with entertainment, not community. Play itself is disappearing from American childhood, with kids having lost 8 hours of play per week when compared to the 1970s. The families who need playgrounds most are the ones least likely to have them. When we tested three campaign concepts, one won decisively among casual fans.

NFL PLAYGROUNDS unifies the league's youth platforms and programs under one ecosystem. This campaign will be brought to life through two hero TV spots, an interactive traveling festival, a UGC campaign, and in-venue activation across 890+ youth sports venues. Casual fan families engage with NFL-owned media during major cultural moments such as the Super Bowl, halftime shows, and viral highlights, not in their everyday lives. Our $10 million media budget meets them there.

OUR CAMPAIGN WILL RESULT in a 25% lift in aided program awareness among casual fans, a 10-point shift in NFL brand perception toward "community-first", and 50K+ direct program registrations as measured against baselines established by our own primary research.

CAMPAIGN OBJECTIVES

01 Increase unaided awareness of NFL youth-wellness programs among casual fan families

02 Shift NFL brand perception from entertainment-first to community-first among casual fans

03 Convert awareness into action; families who find, use, and participate in NFL Playgrounds programs.

THE NFL IS ALREADY IN THEIR LIVES. THEY JUST DON'T KNOW IT YET.

THE NFL'S LARGEST AUDIENCE SEGMENT IS ITS MOST UNDERSERVED

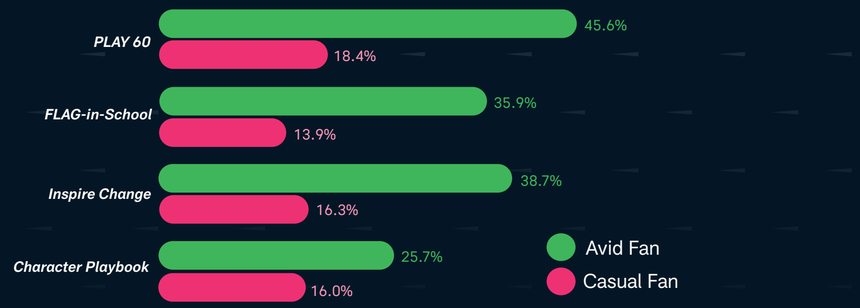

Casual fan families engage with the NFL during major cultural moments such as the Super Bowl, the halftime show, and viral highlights. The NFL doesn't register as part of these families' everyday lives or their children's development.

THE PROGRAMS EXIST. THE CREDIT DOESN'T.

Programs are attributed to the school, the coach, or the community center. Anyone but the NFL.

1 in 6
casual fan parents can name an NFL youth program

WHAT CASUAL FANS VALUE

Health & Teamwork
Casual fan families value physical, social, and mental wellbeing and teamwork. The exact programs NFL Playgrounds delivers.

Safe Spaces
Families want environments where kids can participate without the weight of competition, cost, or commitment. Fun comes first.

Belonging
Across every community we spoke with (suburban, urban, Latino, multicultural) belonging matters more than winning. Kids stay when they feel like they fit.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR GIRLS

2x Girls drop out of sports at TWICE the rate of boys by adolescene. Not because of ability, because of access.

"The moment a girls' team opened up, she was ALL IN."
- Parent Interview

Families live in everyday moments in school fields, backyards, and local parks. The NFL lives in stadium moments.
Until those worlds CONNECT, youth initiatives remain invisible.

PLAY IS DISAPPEARING AND THE CONSEQUENCES ARE ALREADY HERE.

The science is clear. The urgency is real. And NOBODY has stepped up to save it.

FUN IS THE FOUNDATION FOR DEVELOPMENT

The American Academy of Pediatrics doesn't classify play as a childhood luxury. It classifies it as a biological necessity, essential for healthy development, as important as sleep, nutrition, and human connection.

Play is the mechanism through which children develop executive function, emotional resilience, and social skills. It is how they learn to negotiate, fail gracefully, persevere, and belong. These aren't soft outcomes. They are the foundational competencies that predict long-term success in school, work, and life.

When we talk about play disappearing, we're not just talking about kids missing out on fun. We are talking about kids missing out on the process of becoming.

FAMILIES WANT PLAY. THE INFRASTRUCTURE ISN'T THERE.

The decline of play is not evenly distributed and the families who need playgrounds most are the ones least likely to have them.

40% LESS ACCESS to quality recreational spaces for lower-income vs. higher-income household

LATINO NEIGHBORHOODS have significantly fewer parks, fields, and safe outdoor spaces per capita

Screen time hasn't replaced play because kids prefer screens. It has replaced play because the alternatives have disappeared from the neighborhoods that need them.

8 HOURS A WEEK OF FREE PLAY LOST SINCE THE 1970s. AN ENTIRE SCHOOL DAY OF PLAY, GONE. HERE'S WHAT THAT COSTS.

CAUSES

27% Physical health declines. Only 27% of children meet recommended daily physical activity. Childhood obesity rates have tripled since the same period free play began its decline.

70% Kids quit. 70% of children leave organized sports by age 13. This is not because of inability, but because it stopped being fun. When play becomes performance pressure, children will walk away.

EFFECTS

83% Parents feel it but can't fix it alone. 83% of parents say outdoor play is important. But safety concerns, lack of accessible spaces, and over-scheduled lives are barriers they cannot overcome individually.

Mental health suffers.
Childhood anxiety, depression, and loneliness have risen in direct correlation with the loss of free play. The Surgeon General's 2023 advisory on loneliness specifically cites the loss of community play spaces.

This is not a screen time problem or a parenting problem. This is a structural problem that requires institutional solutions.

Fun is the front door. Kids quit sports because they stopped being fun. Across every focus group, interview, and secondary source we consulted, one finding was consistent. Enjoyment is the single strongest predictor of whether a child continues to participate in sports. It isn't talent, pressure, or a long-term goal, it's fun. When the game becomes too structured or too demanding, kids don't push through. They walk away. Fun isn't a bonus, it's an entry point, the reason they start.

Other leagues have programs. The NFL has an ecosystem.

The NFL has the scale to address physical health, mental health wellness, character development, community safety, and inclusion simultaneously. The missing piece isn't to invest or create more programs. It's the story.

8.1% annual FLAG football among kids 6-12

34K+ schools reached by FLAG-in-Schools

3M+ students reached annually via PLAY 60

$460M+ invested by Inspire Change

THE NFL IS EVERYWHERE. CASUAL FAN FAMILIES JUST DON'T SEE IT THAT WAY.

THE PERCEPTION GAP ISN'T ABOUT DISTRUST, IT'S ABOUT DISTANCE. AND DISTANCE CAN BE CLOSED.

84.8%

of casual fans agree the NFL is primarily focused on

ENTERTAINMENT. NOT COMMUNITY.

Community work, youth development, and neighborhood investment don't enter the picture. This isn't because families don't value those things, but because the NFL has never made them visible.

CASUAL FAN FAMILIES DON'T OPPOSE THE NFL IN THEIR COMMUNITIES, THEY JUST DON'T SEE IT THERE

what they believe	what already exists
"The NFL is about big games and big stars."	PLAY 60 has inspired 38M kids to move and live healthier
"Football isn't really for kids like mine."	FLAG-in-Schools reaches 3M+ schools across all 50 states
"The NFL doesn't show up in our community."	Inspire Change has invested $460M+ into education, equity, & community uplift
"Youth programs come from schools, not the NFL."	Character Playbook provides SEL tools to 3M+ youth through digital curriculum

The NFL's investment in youth is real, substantial, and already working. The problem isn't what the NFL does. It's what casual fan familes families can see.

THE NFL'S OWN DATA POINTS TO THE SAME ANSWER.

The NFL's brief identified something important: the top THREE drivers of net positive fan perception are player involvement in communities, a greater sense of NFL inclusivity, and support of charitable initiatives. All these are rooted in social responsibility and community work.

The NFL already knows community work drives brand love. The missing piece is making that work VISIBLE to the families who haven't seen it yet.

This is exactly what NFL Playgrounds does.

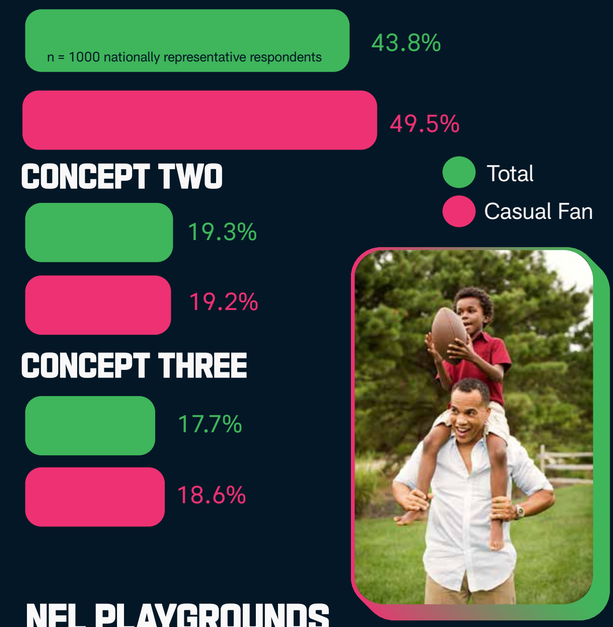

The NFL's biggest strength is cultural dominance, its spectacle, its scale. However, this is simultaneously its biggest obstacle with casual fan families. The louder the stadium gets, the further away everyday communities feel.

We didn't just identify the opportunity. We tested it.

3 concepts tested I n=1000

NFL Playgrounds won decisively among casual fans - the audience that matters most

NFL PLAYGROUNDS
outperformed on every measure
— FIT, BELIEVABILITY, & PREFERENCE — across all audience segments.

"It sounds fun without being too serious. Kids can just play."
-Parent, focus group

The insight is simple. Casual fan families don't need to be convinced the NFL cares about kids. They need to be shown where the NFL already is.
NFL Playgrounds is the connective layer that makes the invisible visible in the spaces where kids begin, long before they ever set foot in a stadium. It meets kids where they are.

MEET THE CRUZ-WATSONS.

The Cruz-Watsons are a bicultural family living in the suburbs of Denver. Maria (44) is a teacher. Chris (47) is a construction manager. They're raising three kids, Sofia (15), Emma (13), and Mateo (9), on a comfortable middle-class income, a packed family calendar, and not nearly enough hours in the day.

Chris grew up in Philly. He'll watch the Eagles if they're on. Maria grew up with Mexican fútbol. American football has never quite been her game. Emma and Mateo both recently played flag football through NFL FLAG-in-Schools at their respective schools. Neither of them knew it was the NFL behind it. Neither did their parents.

The Cruz-Watsons don't reject the NFL. They just don't see themselves in it. YET.

THE GAP BETWEEN WHERE THE NFL LIVES AND WHERE FAMILIES DO

The NFL Lives Here	The Cruz-Watsons Live Here
Sunday afternoon stadiums	Saturday morning school fields
70,000 fans roaring	One voice yelling "Nice catch!"
Highlight reels and championships	Kids deciding teams in the backyard
Avid fan media channels	Facebook, TikTok, Youtube

Business Objective	Unify the NFL's fragmented youth health and wellness programs under a single emotionally resonant platform that builds long-term brand affinity among casual fan families.
Communication Objective	Make casual fan families aware that the NFL is already present in the everyday spaces where their kids play, grow, and belong. Give them a reason to engage.
Human Problem	Families like the Cruz-Watsons live in everyday moments. The NFL lives in stadium moments. Until those moments connect the NFL's most meaningful work remains invisible.
Brand Role	NFL Playgrounds = the NFL's commitment to bringing play to every kid, in every community, before they ever set foot in a stadium.

NFL Playgrounds is the NFL's COMMITMENT to bringing play to every kid, in every community, long before they ever set foot in a stadium. It doesn't create new programs or replace what exists. It connects casual fan families, who haven't seen what the NFL is doing, to the SPACES WHERE THEIR KIDS BEGIN.

PLAYGROUNDS MANIFESTO

Before the stadium, there was a STRETCH OF GRASS. Before the roster, there was a group of kids picking teams. Before the crowd, there was one voice yelling, "Nice catch." That's where it STARTS. Backpacks for sidelines. Old t-shirts for flags. Couches for end zones. The PLAYGROUND was never the swings or monkey bars. It was US. We RAN until our legs gave out. We LAUGHED until our stomachs hurt. We FELL DOWN, over and over and over. We didn't have a CARE IN THE WORLD. Except for having FUN. Now there's more pulling at kids than ever. More to watch. More to scroll. More distractions. Because when PLAY stops being a priority, kids start missing out. So the NFL is making sure they don't. Not just under the bright lights. But in SCHOOLS. In PARKS. In BACKYARDS. Across COMMUNITIES. Through programs that build BELONGING, CONFIDENCE, CHARACTER and CONNECTION. We're in the spaces WHERE KIDS BEGIN. Because before the confidence and the character.

THERE'S JUST A KID WHO NEEDS TO PLAY. THIS IS NFL PLAYGROUNDS.

CAMPAIGN CONCEPTS & EXECUTIONS

THE IDEA: NFL PLAYGROUNDS

The NFL's youth initiatives already exist in the spaces where casual fan families live in school fields, community parks, and backyards. They just aren't visible as a unified NFL presence. NFL Playgrounds is designed to make them highly visible and based on a powerful emotional truth.

There's always a kid who needs to play. And there's always room for one more.

Billboard Design

WHY THIS WORKS FOR THE NFL

This is the campaign that only the NFL can own because it's built on what they're already doing- showing up where kids play. Playgrounds brings all the NFL youth initiatives together, making them visible in the lives of casual fan families.

WHAT EVERY EXECUTION HAS IN COMMON

Tone & Voice

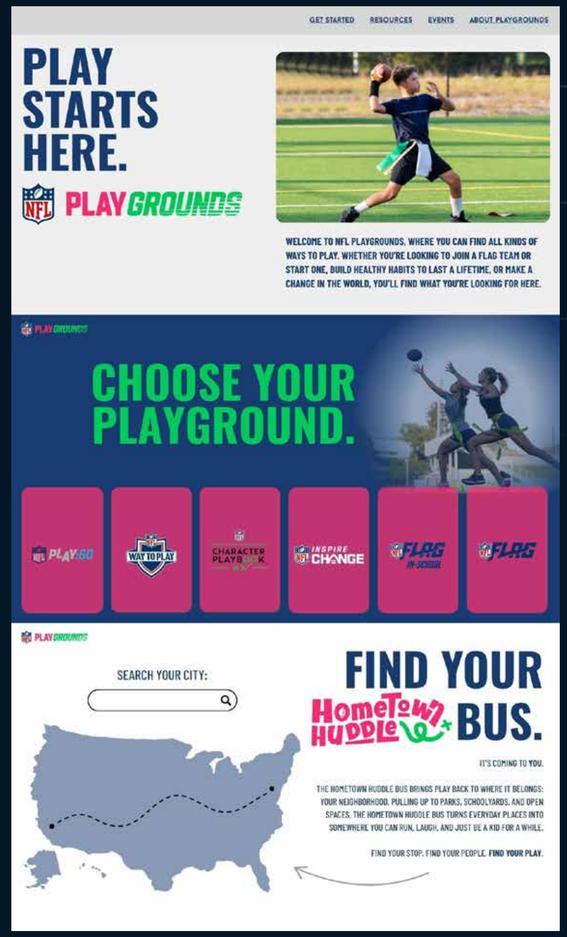

Our voice is fun first, prioritizing joy, play, and the energy of the game instead of structure or rules. It is youth-forward, speaking in a way that feels natural, current, and relatable to kids without trying too hard. The tone is confident but never preachy, to allow the message to come through authentically. Above all, it is community-centered to celebrate connection, inclusion, and the shared experiences of play.

Visual Language

The NFL Playgrounds visual world is grounded in real spaces: grass fields, backyards, and imperfect places where kids naturally gather to play. Natural light is used to create warmth and authenticity, avoiding anything overly staged or artificial. Movement and texture are emphasized to capture the energy, spontaneity, and physicality of play. The shots chosen reinforce that the game belongs to the kids first.

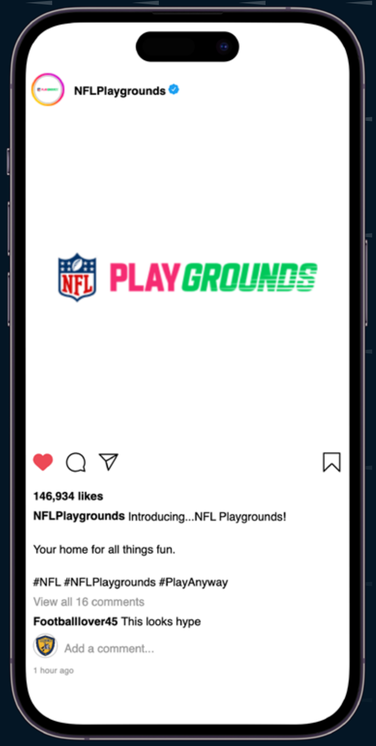

Playgrounds is an ecosystem, not another program or platform.

It's a living system designed to show up wherever kids play. From storytelling to physical spaces, executions work together to build a consistent, recognizable presence that meets casual fan families where they are.

Why it reaches casual families: Local parks and high school stadiums generate local news coverage, parent word-of-mouth, and organic social content, reaching the Cruz-Watsons through channels they already trust.

FROM THE FIELD

#FromtheField · #LittleWins

A digital-first, community-powered storytelling campaign where kids and families share everyday "little wins" through play- short videos that capture the real moments NFL Playgrounds programs are already creating.

HOW IT TRAVELS BEYOND SOCIAL

Local News "Moment of the Week" segments air on local TV affiliates in Hometown Huddle cities- reaching parents through trusted channels they already watch

FLAG Coach Network Coaches in 34,000+ FLAG-in-Schools programs invite families to submit moments, creating an authentic pipeline of content tied directly to NFL programs

ScoreVision Top Playgrounds Moments play on in-venue displays at youth sports facilities, making the UGC campaign visible in the physical spaces where families already are.

Hometown Huddle GENERATES the moments. Playgrounds Moments AMPLIFIES them.

Neither activation asks casual fan families to come to the NFL. Both show up where the families already are- in community parks, high school stadiums, local news, and the social platforms they actually use. That's what NFL Playgrounds looks like in the wild.

MEETING FAMILIES WHERE THEY ACTUALLY ARE

NFL PLAYGROUNDS DOESN'T ASK CASUAL FAN FAMILIES TO COME TO THE NFL. IT BRINGS THE NFL TO THEM, ON PLATFORMS THEY USE, IN VENUES ATTENDED, AND THROUGH THE CHANNELS THEY TRUST.

THE OWNED MEDIA PROBLEM:

NFL's owned channels – NFL Network, team social, NFL.com – reach avid fans who are already watching. Casual fan familes aren't consuming NFL media. This budget goes where they are.
